WAITING.

I am waiting, weary—lonely—

Waiting, oh, so patiently,

For the one I love, who comes

In the house prepared for me,

In that home are many memories,

That I have no time to leave,

Jesus over our dear side brother,

Death in that bright world above.

What should I do?

Pray for my brother down,

But he is old and worn—old,

With a heart, deathly pale,

Death is so hard, erect, stern,

But a kind and loving friend,

Open thy heart to me, my friend,

That the spirits may ascend.

Up to brighter, purer regions,

Up to dear Father's home,

Up to the bright, happy before,

Who life's theory paths have trod;

Who life's deep, dark, death, the date,

Opened to receive its spirit,

Joyful, like the bright sun.

Pray for me, my friend.

Pray

THE BRECKENRIDGE NEWS

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 16, 1882.

WALLACE GRUELL, . . . . . Editor.
For Governor
Subjet to the Indiana Democratic Party
Mrs. B. P. McEL, of Muncie.

TODAY we published a official return of the election in this county. We were aware that fully three hundred of the total votes registered were cast for the party which would run to vote for Herter, and that a few of them contemplated voting for Bauch, but we did not for a moment dream that a sleep-would enter the county. We simply supposed that his majority would range from fifty to one hundred. We did our part in the game, and the result was that the anti-slavery candidates will be congenitally disengaged. We do not regret the assist of the majority of the party in giving its vote to his opponent. For reasons we cannot give we could not see our way clear to support Col. Jacobs. We had no sympathy with the movement that resulted in his candidacy. We did not say so, but we did not like it. We did not say so, but when the party could not support with unanimity. We think the lesson of this year will have a wholesome effect upon the party managers. We are clearly of the opinion that for some time to come our conventions will closely scrutinize the morals and habits of those who come forward for nomination, before they venture upon an experimentalistic that of year.

It will be seen that all our nominees for county offices have been triumphantly beat, except Buck Board for surveyor, and he owes his defeat to his patriotic unselfishness. He told his friends every where over the country that he would not be a candidate for him for one Miller not to hesitate to do what he could to help him—but that he would rather be defeated ten times over than have Miller defeated. Following his advice and acting upon his wish, more than one hundred votes were thus secured for Miller and the latter's election assured. Surely such conduct is worthy of the party and the people merit substantial reward, and we real the temper of the gallant democracy of old Breckinridge to little purpose if in the future they do not show appreciation of Buck Board's noble conduct in a manner more appropriate to the materials and qualities of the man and his services to the party. Such men are scarce in any party; and they can not be too highly rewarded.
